LPGA Selects Corridor to Automate and Accelerate Contract Management

Newburyport, Mass. (PRWEB) July 17, 2019

Corridor Company, Inc., the leading provider of contract management software for Office 365 and SharePoint customers, today announced that the Ladies Professional Golf Association (LPGA), the world's leading professional golf organization for women, has selected Corridor's Contracts 365 to serve as its contract management platform.

To support a high volume of contracts, the LPGA was looking for an easy-to-use contract management solution that would integrate with the company's existing Office 365 infrastructure, while providing a simple means for business users to request contracts and remain informed of their status in addition to robust contract authoring and obligation management tools.

"Each LPGA property requires a large number of contracts to be processed in a short amount of time. Contracts 365 will allow our legal team to keep pace with our growing organization while ensuring obligations are being met," said the LPGA's Assistant General Counsel Kourtney Bigelow. "Because the solution is built on Office 365, the seamless integration provides maximum benefit for our legal department and minimal extra work for IT."

"It's no surprise industry-leading companies looking for every competitive advantage, focus heavily on implementing sound contract management processes," said Russ Edelman, CEO of Corridor Company. "We look forward to working with LPGA to deliver on its vision for contract management optimization."
